

PROGRAM

The BRICS (Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa) aim at speaking with one voice: The one of the Southern hemisphere challenging the domination of northern industrial countries. A development bank led by them is under way which is supposed to represent countries in transition and development countries better than the World Bank and the IMF.

Yet new partnerships are being build all over the world: NAEKT being one of them (Nigeria, Angola, Ethiopia, Kenya and Tanzania).

This weekend we will have a look at the chances which such partnerships offer for countries, societies and also for returning experts to these countries. Some of them might come up with new ideas and forms of partnerships that might stabilize regions or find regional solutions to regional problems.

On Saturday morning we will learn more about the cooperation with so-called "emerging powers". Then we will have a look at how China is redefining development geographies. On Sunday we will get an overview on the Latin-America partnership MERCOSUR.
